Background information and key objectives

Course overview

This session explores the changes brought by the new EU AML/CFT legislative package, including the creation of the Anti-Money Laundering Authority (AMLA), the directly applicable AML Regulation (AMLR), the revised AML Directive (AMLD6), and the revised Transfer of Funds Regulation (TFR).

The lecture offers a structured overview of the evolving regulatory architecture, the rationale for establishing AMLA as a centralised supervisor, the interplay between EU-wide rules and national supervisory authorities, delving into the main changes in compliance obligations for obliged entities.

Following the legal analysis, an industry expert will offer insights into the operational and strategic implications of these reforms for companies — from group-wide risk assessments and transaction monitoring to the anticipated changes in supervisory expectations, cross-border reporting obligations, and governance structures.

Take-Aways

The EU AML/CFT package marks the most significant reform of the Union's financial crime framework in decades. With AMLA becoming formally operational from July 2025, and the new AML Regulation applying directly from 2027, firms face a multi-year window to restructure compliance, enhance reporting, and prepare for increasingly centralized supervision. For cross-border groups, the shift away from fragmented national standards to a directly applicable regulation introduces substantial legal, operational, and governance challenges — especially concerning customer due diligence, PEP screening, and ownership transparency (UBO identification). This session equips participants with both the legal tools to understand what's coming, and the operational guidance to start preparing today.

Who should attend

- Compliance officers and MLROs in financial institutions
- Legal and regulatory affairs professionals
- Internal audit and risk control teams
- Policy professionals and public sector supervisors
- Fintech/legaltech professionals engaged in AML tooling
